

Black Holes

General Relativity predicts the existence of horizons.

The simplest example is a black hole.

The horizon is the sphere which separates the causally disconnected regions of spacetime.

- Today there is good evidence that many galactic cores are black holes

Thus:

Black Holes are matter and “information” graveyards.